

Ogden Farmers' LIBRARY

INTERNET ACCESS POLICY

Monroe County Library System (MCLS) provides internet access for Ogden Farmers' Library. The Internet is an unmediated, global medium which offers access to a wealth of excellent material, but also provides access to materials and images which some people might find offensive or disturbing.

The Children's Internet Protection Act requires all public and school libraries in the United States to use a filter to protect children from pornography and other harmful material available on the Internet. In compliance with this law, MCLS provides filtering as part of their internet access for the library. Comments or concerns regarding this should be addressed in writing to the Ogden Farmers' Library, Attn: Director, 269 Ogden Center Road, Spencerport, NY 14559.

The library cannot control materials and images available on the Internet. Therefore users must be aware that the Ogden Farmers' Library and its agents cannot be held responsible for what may be accessed through the library computers.

The library upholds and affirms the right of each individual, regardless of age, to access constitutionally protected material. However, due to the public atmosphere of the library, we require users to follow the code of conduct while accessing the Internet. That code of conduct is shown and must be agreed to as part of every internet session on our public computers, and is available on our website or upon request.

The library also affirms the right and responsibility of parents to monitor their children's use of the library materials and resources, including the Internet.
